

Bees need our help.

Today they are in danger.

Modern monoculture practices are linked to the decline, leading many to support increasing urban bee populations to create environmental resilience.

We create programming with public, private and parochial partners to engage their community and help create outreach to returning vets, our homeless community and our re-entering population. We seek support to create sustainable jobs producing urban bee hives made from locally harvested wood through the offices of sustainability utilizing public parks and private spaces. We teach beekeeping lessons, train apprentices, setup and maintain bee hives as well as support new beekeepers.

We are helping others to be the difference by following the lessons of the bees. Collaborate, cooperate, communicate and make abundance.

Help us spread the buzz at a gathering you know. rotary, garden group, religious gathering, trade show, classroom, corporate function or community event.

What's the buzz?

Bees are important to our ecosystem as they bring abundance to nature's bloom. They play an essential role in food security. It is through insect pollination that we get our most important foods.

BeeVangelists

We're a group dedicated to spreading the buzz about insect pollinators through advocacy, education, products and programs. Like the bees, we pollinate abundance in our community, only with programs to help change public perception by changing the way people see honey bees.

We host hives throughout metro Milwaukee at schools, universities, corporate campuses, retirement communities, golf courses, public parks, ecology centers and neighborhood gardens. We present hive activities like candle-making, honey extracting, wax melting as well as hands-on beekeeping and picture lectures called 'beesentations'. BeeVangelists create communal experiences celebrating interconnectedness through accessible activities that support individual and collective courage and innovation. Our activities build confidence, a sense of generous give-and-take, and a connection to caring that is fun, joyful and exciting!

Swarm with us in a pollinator parade to raise awareness. Bee part of the hive and help staff events and markets or sponsor one of our programs.

We are funded through public and private grants, donations and by making products from our urban apiaries. We've partnered with many organizations to empower them with bee-centric programming. Giving presentations at events, in classrooms, at conferences and even to congregations.
